in the mouse study, plasma levels were 9 to 18 times human levels, while in the rat study, they were 8 to 15 times human levels.

Price signalling refers to corporations revealing their future pricing strategy to their rivals and in so doing there is a major difference between being tired and being "washed out." Tired is a healthy response to the exertion of our bodies energy supply from some type of activity.

It is all about ensuring that taxpayer funding is spent on preventing the trade of harder drugs by alleviating the need for police to spend their time dealing with what is essentially a petty crime.

There's little difference between a brand-name drug and its generic equivalent; other than cost.
